Startups welcome PM's proposals

By Bureau
Bangalore, Jan 16

PRIME Minister Narendra Modi's proposals to provide income tax exemption for startups for the first three years and give tax exemption on capital gains were well received by the startups, who believed that these moves will enable more entrepreneurs to come into the system. The assurance by finance minister Arun Jaitley that the forthcoming budget will be more tax friendly for the startup ecosystem has raised hopes among entrepreneurs that capital flows into the segment will expand beyond the realm of venture capitalists and private equity.

The startups in India and investors are faced with nagging tax issues like the angel tax on investments and burdensome compliance procedures which disheartens entrepreneurs from their core business while discourages prospective investors. In this context these proposals are bound to provide great relief. The move to provide faster exit for startups, which can now rely on a fund of funds of 10,000 crore, and the setting up of a panel of facilitators to help in filing of patent applications were proposals which were met with maximum cheer.

Ashish Goel, co-founder and CEO, Urban Ladder, an online furniture company, told FE, "Clarity of listing norms, faster clearances and inclusive growth will encourage entrepreneurs to build innovative businesses. Secondly, there is a need for a seasoned entrepreneur to chair the entrepreneurial Startups in India witnessed a total investment of $9 billion in 2015 which is equal to this segment between 2010 and 2014. But there is a view in the startup ecosystem that this would surge even further in a more simplified regulatory environment.

Role of government that of catalyst, cos need to do hard work: Goyal

Zomato founder Deepinder Goyal says 'best startups get built in worst of times'

Zomato founder and CEO Deepinder Goyal

New Delhi, Jan 16: Emphasising that the role of the government is mainly to act as a catalyst and provide a conducive enabling environment, online restaurant guide and food ordering firm Zomato on Saturday said it is for companies to do the hard work to succeed.

"The government can only play the catalyst, but still all the hard work has to be done by companies who start in any sector," Zomato founder and CEO Deepinder Goyal said at the Start Up India conference here.

"If some roadblocks get removed, it's a great thing. But even if they don't, it should not be an excuse for not doing anything."

Talking about the challenges they face, Goyal said "best startups got built in worst of times." Companies which will be out there in the next five years will be the best ones.

Making it clear that the issue of capital should not be a roadblock, he said: "In terms of access to capital, if you look at all tech startups in India, they all started in 2007-08 when there was absolutely no funding on the table."

On Zomato's expansion plans, Goyal said: 'Right now, we are in 23 countries and market leaders in 18 of these markets. Right now, we are focusing on becoming number one in five markets' present generation of start-ups, Goyal noted, is they want access to capital, incubation, government help to all fall in place.

"That's not how startups work. It is actually the other way around," he added. On Zomato's expansion plans in the near future, Goyal said: "Right now, we are in 23 countries and market leaders in 18 of these markets. Right now, we are focusing on becoming number one in five markets. When we get there, we will think of further expansion."

Asked if the company is looking to raise funds for expansion, he said: "Not right now. We have enough in bank." PTT
